

Soness Stevens Kitano presents
ANIME-ZING! GAME SHOW: Where voice actors dub live on stage.

"Feels like you're playing party games with your friends — except your friends are incredibly talented voice actors!" — Jamie, audience member

What happens when you invite audiences into the recording booth*?

Anime-Zing! Game Show is an interactive comedy and voice acting experience where professional voice actors and audience volunteers create characters, perform sound effects, and dub indie animation together live on stage. Created by Tokyo-based voice actor Soness Stevens Kitano, the show offers a behind-the-scenes peek into the craft of indie animation, from storyboards and animatics to finished scenes. Whether you volunteer to play or enjoy from your seat, you'll leave feeling like you've spent an hour playing party games with incredibly talented friends.

Think Whose Line Is It Anyway? meets indie anime dubbing and game night. No anime knowledge required.

not actually recorded, but you'll wish it was.*

Soness Stevens Kitano is a Tokyo-based voice actor, comedian, and producer who has spent nearly three decades bringing characters to life in Japan.

Her voice credits include Hello Kitty (1999–2024), Lola Pop (ARMS), Pink Bomber (Super Bomberman R), and Cade Shelby (Inazuma Eleven Victory Road), as well as projects for Nintendo, Konami, Level-5, NHK, and Sanrio.

As an AuDHD creator, Soness believes the future of anime lies in indie artists, diverse voices, and human creativity over AI mimicry.

This year's Edinburgh Fringe performances also feature New York City-based voice actor, director, and educator Jesse R. Tandler (Grand Theft Auto, Bully, Law & Order). Jesse helps lead audience games, character challenges, and live dubbing activities alongside creator and host Soness Stevens Kitano.

"Feels like you're playing party games with your friends — except your friends are incredibly talented voice actors!"— Jamie

*"I know nothing about anime, but I went with a friend and had a fantastic time."—
Laura*

"The best show of the Fringe I've been to so far."— Matthew
